

Ideas on That Launches New Service to Help Seniors Who Cannot Use Email

Summary: In an effort to help people who are unable to use email, an industry leader in developing innovative ideas for people across the globe, has developed a new service that makes it possible to send emails by post.

(May 23, 2018) --- Representatives with Ideas of That announced today that it has launched a new service called emailLESS that's geared toward helping seniors interact with email using regular posts.

"The main feature is that only letters and Canada Post is needed," Ideas of That Spokesman Darwin Ramon said before adding, "email replies are sent via post also."

Ramon went on to note that the mission of emailLESS is to help people who cannot use email; "we can send their messages via regular post."

The company spokesman explained that the way the service works is that his company sends a letter by email.

"Mail us your letter and a check payment and we will digitalize your letter and send it via an email that contains a real size image of it," Ramon revealed. "When a reply is received, we will print it and send it to you by post."

As for why this new service was created, Ramon stressed that not everyone can use a computer or smart cell phone.

"My grandmother cannot and she prefers to write letters and receive letters, so I came up with this," Ramon said.

Ramon, who holds a master's in E-Commerce from the University of Montreal and HEC, said he is very excited about this new service and invites anyone who cannot use email to give it a try.

"I am sure you'll love it," said Ramon. "It's easy to use and allows you to email by post."
